Steven Wyrick posted:

My dad was always caring and an big hearted person who can get along with anyone he stepped aside with, never disliked anyone and always respected the other man. Loved his passion for cars and as well for animals. I remember when I was a younger child he would always try to show me things in life but they never kicked in until he and my mom had separated and I had to be the man while he was gone. now I realize he thought me the more important things in life of how to raise my family when I have one and how to be more of a joyful person around other people.
